B. Read the following passage and answer the questions in your own words:
   [5 × 2 = 10]

Fish have a wider field of vision than men. The interesting fact is that they can see both front and back, since their eyes are usually at the side of the head. But they cannot sleep as they have no eyelids. The largest “Tooth Carp” has some interesting features. It has four eyes divided into upper and lower halves enabling it to see objects above and below the surface of water. But the most fascinating aspect is the “flat fish” which has both eyes on one side of its head - either on the right or on the left. The eye on one side of the head moves to the other side as the fish grows. The left-eyed as well as the right-eyed flat fish rests on the blind side of the body. Most incredible! But true. Generally fish take oxygen from water by means of gills. But ‘lung fish’ have lung-like structures that enable them to take oxygen from the air. In some cases, the small fish are eaten by the large ones. This long chain of ‘eating’ and ‘being eaten’ is called ‘food chain’.

Questions:
44. What is the interesting fact about the vision of fish?
45. In what ways are the four eyes helpful to the ‘Tooth Carp’?
46. Mention the most fascinating features of ‘flat fish’.
47. How do the Lung fish take in oxygen?
48. Explain ‘food chain’.

IV. A. Answer in a paragraph:
   49. Ahimsa means love, non-violence. Satyagraha means ‘soul force’, ‘truth force’. Gandhi praises women to be embodiments of Ahimsa and Satyagraha. He venerates ancient women such as Sita, Savithri, Damayanthi and Draupadi who are endowed with sacrifice, silent suffering, humility, faith, love and kindness. This is a proof that they dominate men by their mental strength, by their soul force. Such women, says Gandhi, can come together to achieve world peace. They are capable of kicking away the atom bomb like a ball. Hence, he prefers to have women in his army.
   50. Johnson wanted to make his work immortal by giving it longevity. And he wished to dedicate it to his country. So he worked towards the study of developing the language making it incomparable among the nations of the European continent. Time should comment on its immortality and reputation. Scientists and men of letters should gain light. Propagators of knowledge should gain access to it. He wished to make it unique.

51. It was decided by three men: - President Truman of America who succeed President Roosevelt, Premier Clement Attlee of England, a small-town politician who defeated Winston Churchill renowned as the war premier and Marshal Chiang Kai-Shek, a puzzling enigma who had turned from Communist to Nationalist, very firm against Japan and its savage tortures.

Their departing point was Tinian in the Mariana islands. Seven Boeing Super Fortress planes were chosen for the barbaric assignment. Three were sent ahead to report on the weather. Two carried instruments and observers. B29 was loaded with the bomb. Another was ready to take over if B29 failed for any reason.

IV. B. Write an essay

52. Introduction: Shakespeare, by the speeches of Brutus and Mark Antony in ‘Julius Caesar’ has set a good example of how words can express wit, reasoning, judgement and stir emotions.

Brutus justifies his deeds: Brutus, in his speech, aims at justifying his killing of Caesar. He expressed his love for Rome more than his love for Caesar. His patriotism was projected more than his affinity for his friend. To prove this, he declared his patriotic commitment under the fear of Caesar turning dictator and hence making Romans ‘bondmen’.

His poor reasoning: By his speech, Brutus aimed at freeing himself from the mob’s anger rather than convincing them. His poor reasoning failed to impress them as much as Mark Antony’s oration.

Antony’s emotional oration: Antony, cautious at not blaming Brutus directly, presented his purpose plainly - “I have come to bury Caesar, not to praise him”. Instead, he chose to praise Brutus and his accomplices as ‘honourable men’. Yet the repetitive use of this phrase was sure to rouse the suspicion and fury of the mob. He slowly played on their rousing emotions and rage. Caesar’s innocence, his patriotic deeds for the good of Rome, his refusal of the Kingly Crown thrice were proofs of his goodness. But the unjust end he faced from the ‘most unkindest cut’ which stained the mantle with his blood, touched their sympathy raising questions against Brutus’ loyalty. The will of Caesar proved his love for the Romans.

The mob psychology: Antony humbled himself till the end talking of ‘noble’ and ‘honourable’ Brutus. He stood there before them as ‘a plain, blunt man’ but sure of stirring them to mutiny by his witty words. His indirect praise of Caesar and the proof of his unjust end was enough to grasp the mob’s rapt attention and slowly bring them to a reasoning. Hence, he understood that they still loved Caesar and so he succeeded in winning them over. He measured his words, was careful in his utterance and reasonable in his speech. Witty Antony had the dead body of Caesar before him to ‘ruffle up their spirits’. Brutus could not win them over only by his words. It was Brutus who turned up to be blunt.

53. Ahtushi Deshpande set off to Munsiyari to start on a trek to the Milam Glacier. She wanted to taste the waters of the sacred ponds, Dudh Kund and Suraj Kund.

At Munsiyari: As if to wipe away memories of her uncomfortable bizarre journey to Munsiyari, the unexpected awe-inspiring sight of the five majestic peaks of the Panchchuli range occupied her mind. The legend of the five Pandavas came to her thoughts. She had reached the right starting point to begin her expedition ‘To The Land of Snow’.

Information on Munsiyari and the Trek: The trek to the highest glacier of the Himalayan Range, the Milam Glacier starts north-west of Munsiyari. The town was once an entrepot of trade for the Bhutia natives till the Indo-China war broke out. Munsiyari is situated in Kumaon region on the Tibet-Nepal border. Only trade came to a halt but the Bhutia traders continue their enterprise in the towns and cities lower down.

The Preparation and her Companions:
Khem Nam, a 65-years old veteran of the valleys, her guide and Laxmi, a young strong porter were her companions on the trek. They loaded their rucksacks with provisions bought at the Munsiyari bazaar.

On the Trek: They trekked for three days upstream along the Goriganga into the mist-covered Milam valley. Their route was dotted with abandoned Bhutia villages, and the ghost villages of Burfu and Bilju. Arrested by the weather on reaching Milam on the sixth day, the drearier weather with an overnight rain, the chill mornings and clouds, howling winds, hailstorms and the sun playing hide and seek were not congenial signs to proceed further. They were arrested by the fickle weather to camp at Ragash Kund for two days and nights. Without firewood, keeping warm was tough at an altitude of 4000 metres.

The Majestic Mountainscape: Towering all around her were beautiful mountains, the spiralling Mandayo like a corkscrew, the sloping Nanda Pal glacier and other peaks and glaciers. They appeared ominous and threatening. The locals saw them as the devouring cliffs of the unholy. But to trekkers like Ahtushi, it was an experience of a life-time.

The Fretful Terrain: They eyed getting to the twin ponds. But the snow-slides had taken away the old route that stones and glacier rubbles had to be crossed and trodden upon very cautiously. They had to walk to the centre of the Milam Glacier. Khem Nam marked their path on crevasses which was fretful with dark stone markers. This would help them to find their way back.

Their Target: The trekkers’ attention fell on the Hardeoli and Trishuli Range. They turned a corner and there below them were the sacred twin ponds of Dudh Kund and Suraj Kund. The icefall formed a beautiful background. She bent down to drink the tasty water. It was the sweetest.

The Return: By nightfall, the trio reached Ragash Kund. Soon the autumn sky turned wintry showering big snowflakes. This continued for three days and nights testing their patience on the snow-covered Milam valley. Patience is an art well-learned by man when left at the mercy of nature’s wrath such storms, avalanches, volcanoes, earthquakes and tsunamis. Just as her patience wore thin, so did the fury of nature.

The Final Obeisance: She started the next day earlier by six to view the abandoned ghost villages of Bilju. The snow-covered roof, the tapering icicles from them, the Nanda Devi main and the Nanda Devi east towering behind as if to bless, held her dumbfounded. It was a face to face view that she had seen through a zoom lens. She paid her obeisance.

Leaving with Sweet Memories: With every detail carved in her memory she left to Munsiyari when Khem Nam and Laxmi joined her. From the quiet, pristine, majestic land of snow to the bustling traffic of Munsiyari.

She had a rich experience that has been narrated with every detail, clear and prolific.

54. Kushwant Singh has projected the irrationality behind superstitions that had cost a life in ‘The Mark of Vishnu.’

Gunga Ram: Gunga Ram was an illiterate Brahmin servant who was superstitious. He adored Lord Vishnu, the preserver, more than Brahma and Shiva of the Trinity. He revered the sanctity of life of all creatures, small or big, from the wasp to the snake, Kala Nag. In his duty to these creatures, he was often ridiculed by the four boys of the household.
His practices: His forehead bore the V-mark in sandal paste in honour of his deity. To him, all life, regardless of its size or its harmful nature, was sacred. He would shove them away from the sight of the boys for fear of any harm befalling them.

His special regard to Kala Nag: As a devotee of Vishnu, the servant had a special regard to the Cobra, Kala Nag. It was about six foot long with a black hood and fleshy body. Every night, a saucer of milk was placed before the snake hole. Finding it emptied in the morning, gave him the pride of feeding it. He continued with this practice inspite of the boys’ teasing that it was the cat which might have drunk it, for snakes eat frogs and not drink milk.

His Anger over the threat: The four boys threatened to kill Kala Nag if they sighted him. This roused Gunga Ram’s anger. The boys said they would catch snakes alive and send them to Bombay to extract their venom for anti-snake-bite serum. In such a way they would make money. The boys’ ridicules upset him much. He was often belittled by their new-fangled ideas and upset over their ignorance of the scriptures and their disregard for Gandhiji’s non-violence.

The Shocking revelation: Once when his saucer of milk was left unemptied, Gunga Ram’s suspicion grew. He followed the boys. They told him that they had caught the Kala Nag and put inside the tin. Then they went to school along with the tin. Gunga Ram was reminded of all the incidents the boys had told about snakes in methylated spirit in their lab. He made up his mind to save it and ask forgiveness for their rash act. So he went to their school with his saucer and a jug of milk.

His fatal end: Unaware of the way it had been hit and battered and tied up in the tin, its fury, and Kala Nag’s escape from the tin, the devotee Gunga Ram stood at the entrance of the lab. The snake making a bid for freedom pulled itself wobbling and wrangling in agony to the entrance. Its eyes were red with fury. But seeing Gunga Ram before it, it found an outlet to its anger. It spat and bit him all over his bowed head laying the V-mark permanently. It led to his fatal death. Gunga Ram cried in pain, being blinded instantly by the venom. There was froth from his mouth. Kala Nag had escaped into the gutter. Gunga Ram met an ironical death as a devotee of Vishnu.

Superstition is the religion of feeble minds.

C. Poem - ERC - Answers:
64. Reference: These words are from Annie Louisa Walker’s poem “Women’s Rights”.

Context: Women address men and highlight the rights of women.

Explanation: Women live under the household roof and spend their life working for the welfare of the family and its members. Yet, they have an inner longing for freedom, equality and recognition with men. They like to live in the household, but with recognition. They are happy though their efforts are unseen.

65. Reference: These lines are from the poem “ENGLISH WORDS” by V.K.Gokak.
Context: English speech came to our land like leech-craft to remove the impurities from impure languages.

Explanation: V.K Gokak says that the English Language purifies our souls which is soiled with impurities.

66. Reference: These lines are from the poem “THE MAN HE KILLED” by Thomas Hardy.

Context: The narrator searches for an excuse for killing his foe.

Explanation: The poet says that he killed his foe for no reason. He has no other reason and it is clear that the dead soldier belonged to the other troop.

D. Answer in a paragraph

67. The poem, ‘A Psalm of Life’, is known for its optimism and the theme - right attitude of life. The poet gives out the message that pleasure or sorrow is not the goal of life. The purpose of life is to carry out all duties and responsibilities for the progress and good of all. We should realize life is shorter and quicker. Life is like a battlefield and we should not let ourselves be driven like cattle. We should fight bravely as heroes. The poet points out that the past and future are of no significance. We should concentrate in making the best out of the present. We may also follow footsteps of great men who had laid their footsteps on sands of time.

68. In Walt Whitman’s poem ‘A Noiseless Patient Spider’, the spider’s patient web-building is compared with the human soul’s restlessness. Both do their part very optimistically. The former spins the web to trap its prey; the soul seeks a fixation in eternity. Both are on their search.

- The spider muses, moves forward, the soul reflects and ventures.
- The spider is surrounded by the web, the soul by the human body. But both are detached.
- The spider seeks its prey, the soul, the Divinity.
- The filament is the link, death links the soul to the infinite.

Both are optimistic, seeking with continuous efforts. Both are firm in their mission.

69. It was a hot day in July. A golden snake came to the poet’s water trough. It sipped and drank softly. The snake lifted his head and looked at the poet. He mused for a moment and then continued to drink water. In Sicily, golden snakes are dangerous and venomous. The inner voice of education told the poet to kill the snake. But actually, he felt he should not kill it as the snake was a guest to his home. The poet was also afraid of the snake. After drinking enough water, the snake moved towards the hole in the wall. The poet’s cruel mind made him throw a log at it and the snake escaped in hurry. Later, the poet felt very bad of his trivial act as the poet was like an albatross, the symbol of good luck. It was then to him like a king in exile and waiting to be crowned again.

Sparrows are found in many parts of the world and they are of several kinds. The one that is best known to us is the house-sparrow. But there is also the hedge-sparrow that makes its nest in hedges and bushes. A noisy bird, the house-sparrow has its own song, mainly made up of a series of calls and twitters. It makes its nest in some hole or some niche in the house. This nest is no more than an arrangement, not a very tidy one of paper and straw, which may be lined with wool and hair. The hedge-sparrow is more slender than the house-sparrow. It is in brown, black and bluish-green colour. It also sings, often a warbling song. Like the house-sparrow it hops on the ground and makes its own untidy nest. Sparrows eat seeds of many different kinds but much more than seeds, they feed on insects. They lay about one to six eggs at a time.

After the doctor’s exit, as Sue was painting, she heard a low sound. Immediately, she rushed to Johnsy’s bedside and heard Johnsy counting backward. Actually, Johnsy was counting the number of leaves of an ivy vine. At the time, only five leaves were left. Johnsy firmly believed that at the fall of the last leaf, her life would also end. Sue wanted Mr. Behrman who had been always about to paint a masterpiece but had never yet begun it to model for her work. While Sue went to the ground floor to meet him, she told him about Johnsy’s fancy. Behrman wanted to save Johnsy’s life. So, on that dreadful night when cold rain was falling, he painted the last ivy leaf exactly as the original one. Indeed, the last leaf painted by Behrman saved Johnsy’s life but he painted in the persistent cold rain, he died of pneumonia. On the other hand, seeing the last leaf, Johnsy realized that it was a sin to want to die. Sue’s care and attention helped her to recover soon. ‘The Last Leaf’ painted by Behrman proved to be his masterpiece since it saved the life of Johnsy.

Refugee:
Pearl Buck, who was awarded the Nobel prize for literature in 1938, in her ‘The Refugee’ narrated the plight of refugees. The city of Beijing was full of refugees, begging at every door. Swarming into every unskilled trade and service, lying dead on the street at every frozen dawn. The city dwellers did not like their entry fearing that they would be out of their jobs since those refugees were ready to earn by any means. The refugees were from one region. They dressed similarly. There were a few lads in the throng, a few children sitting in baskets slung upon a pole across the shoulders of their fathers, but there was no young girls, no young infants. Though there was no food material with them, each one carried a bedding and an iron cauldron.
The last one of that long procession of silent men and women, was a little old man. He was struggling hard to walk. Suddenly, unable to go no more, he set his bundle gently near a noodle vendor’s stand. A man passing by, gave the old man a silver coin and a copper penny. The old man told that kind hearted man that they did not beg, they had good land and had never starved. As the river flooded, they had no seed because they ate them all.
The old man asked the vendor only a small bowl of noodle, which he fed his grandson with. He added that his son and daughter-in-law were drowned when their dikes broke. The vendor asked the old man what the latter would do with the silver coin. The old man replied that he had decided to spend the money on buying seeds for sowing. His decision proved that ‘Land is dearer than anything else.’

VI. General essay :
37. Science - A Boon or A Bane
Science is responsible for bringing about a drastic and remarkable change in our lives. Science has made our life more comfortable and luxurious.

Science, as said is a good servant but a bad master. In other words, as long as man keeps control over the use of science, it is a good servant. On the other hand, if man becomes slave to the machines, invention then science becomes a bad master. It means man should use science for beneficial purposes, for prudential usages and not for destructive purposes in which he could not have control over his actions.

Man, right from the time he wakes up to the time he goes to sleep depends on electronic gadgets, to electronic mosquito repeller and AC. Women becoming slaves to scientific inventions has made them sick and disease prone. This should be avoided. Too much of dependency on science sometimes makes man unhealthy both physically and mentally.

We live in the age of science. Science makes our life happier, easier and more secure. Science has conquered time and space. Science has turned this earth into a land of wonders and marvels.

The present day world is more comfortable, more charming and more desirable than it was a few decades back. The main reason is the blessings of science.

Science has made education more informative and entertaining. Now-a-days even primary class students use internet services to excel in studies. Edusat - is a good example of how with the help of science, education is being made accessible to common man.

In the field of medicine, the blessings of science are numerous. Due to the progress of science, new medicines have been made. This enables the man to live long. Added to that scientific inventions attempt to change the world into a place without incurable diseases.

Even the fields of commerce and finance use scientific technology for their benefits. Scientific technology is helping the farmers to get more yield.

All the above mentioned facts clearly prove that science is no doubt a blessing and not a curse. The question of curse arises because a few people misuse the advancements made in science for their selfish advantage. Both the World Wars stand as an example to this. Atomic and nuclear energies had been used to destroy places and to put millions of people to death. Even today, terrorists misuse the scientific inventions and cause untold miseries to millions. But for this science is not to be labelled as curse. The evil is within the users. We have conquered space and time but not our minds. Science, is definitely a blessing but it will turn into a curse, if misused.
Let us all resolve to use science for constructive purposes alone and not for destructive motives.

38. Environmental Pollution

Modern Science is very useful to mankind. But at the same time it is harmful to people. This scientific civilization has been responsible for different types of pollution in the world. The important things like water, air and sound are polluted and diseases spread accordingly.

Water pollution is wide spread in India. It causes many diseases among men, animals and fish. Amoebiasis is the most common disease caused by bad water. As people cannot get good drinking water they get diseases and suffer a lot. The main reason is the waste discharged from the factories. There are many chemical factories on the banks of a river. In South India, river Cauvery is much polluted. There are many factories on the banks of the river. Paper industry, textile industry and other industries are found on the banks of the river. The most affected part is Erode district. Rivers Godavari and Krishna are also polluted by the waste materials from the industries situated on the banks of the rivers. The water of the rivers cannot be used for drinking at certain parts of the rivers. Even lakes and tanks situated on the mountains have polluted water.

Not only water but also air is polluted. Textile mills, chemical factories, automobiles all pollute the air by smoke and fumes of sulphur and many acids. In Bhopal, the Union Carbide Company was responsible for killing thousands of people. Methyl Isocyanate leaked from that factory and caused the death of many people. Thousands have been still suffering from the air pollution in Bhopal. Unburnt petroleum causes great pollution in cities. Pesticides also cause pollution in rural areas. Many people die every year.

The most dangerous pollution is sound pollution. It is a great health hazard. It affects the nervous system. Aero planes fly very low causing damage to human nervous system and ear drums. The most unwanted thing which causes damage to the ears is the loud speaker blurring in marriage season and temple festival season. This should be stopped. The most dangerous is TV and radio working in high volume.

In some places, radioactive elements discharged from nuclear energy plants create great problems. This is the most hazardous pollution. People should be protected against this.

39. My Ambition in Life

Ambition is a great incentive to work. A life without ambition is like an arrow without a target. Seneca rightly said, “If one does not know to which port one is sailing, no wind is favourable.” An ambition is a dream with a deadline. All successful people have an ambition. No one can get anywhere unless he knows where he wants to go and what he wants to be or do. Precisely, ambition is the path to success. My ambition in life is to become a teacher. It is the best way to cater to the needs of coming generations.

I know, the task of an excellent teacher is to stimulate apparently ordinary people to unusual effort. The challenge lies in not identifying winners, it is in making winners out of ordinary. I shall strive my best to guide my students not only to acquire knowledge but also prepare for the life in future. Every child is like a flower. I would mould my students to become both intelligent and knowledgeable. In short, all my students would grow up into ideal citizens and great human beings who have love for all living beings.

“A teacher affects eternity; he can never tell where his influence stops” said Henry Adams. Remembering this I would be an ideal teacher. “The mediocre teacher tells; the good teacher explains; the superior teacher demonstrates; the great teacher inspires”. So, I would become a great teacher. And I would work hard to accomplish my ambition.
